NEARBY ATTRACTIONS

Panaji - The capital of Goa was only a small fishing village four centuries ago. It is still small, but it is one of the most beautiful towns in India and the capital of Goa. Rising on the wooded terraces of the Altinho Hill, the town slopes down to Mandovi River on one side to the Arabian Sea on the other. Panaji's Portuguese heritage can be seen in its narrow winding streets, old houses with over hanging balconies, red-tiled roofs and numerous small bars and cafe's. The best way to experience this place is to take a walk.

Mapusa - 13kms from Panaji, Mapusa is a small town forming the hub of north Goa. It hosts a blend of residential and commercial establishments and gardens. People from all over Goa come here to buy and sell their wares in the famous Friday market. 14 km from Mapusa is the Kansarpal-Kalbadevi temple, believed to be about 800 years old.

Margao (Madgaon) - is the second largest city in Goa and a commercial metropolis. A pleasant provincial town with throwbacks to its Portuguese past, it has a series of beaches in an 18 km stretch of silvery sand: Paleolean, Betul and Colva. Other interesting places around Margao are Chandreshwar Bhutnath temple and the Rachol Seminary and church that dates back to the early 16th century.

Chandor - 13 km east of Margao across the fertile rice fields of Salcete lies the sleepy village of Chandor, a scattering of tumbledown villas and farmhouses ranged along shady tree-lined lanes. The splendid Perreira-Braganza/Menezes-Braganza house, regarded as the grandest of Goa's colonial mansions is the prime attraction. Dominating the dusty village square, the house, built in the 1500s by the wealthy Braganza family for their two sons, has a huge double-storeyed facade, with twenty-eight windows flanking its entrance.

Vasco-Da-Gama - This spick and span coastal town popularly known as Vasco was originally called Sambhaji. Imposing multi-storied buildings and a church dominate the city centre here. This well laid out city is also the railway terminus for passenger service. Goa's only airport, Dabolim is also 4km from Vasco, at the other end.
